While short hair is definitely more manageable in winter (no more knotted hair in your scarf, yay!) and it feels nice not to have sweaty strands sticking to your neck in hot months, cropped cuts are becoming popular for another reason in 2019: They're just super freaking cute. The notch is seriously trending, with everyone from influencers to celebrities swapping their long locks for a short 'do. Supermodel Karlie Kloss recently cut off the length for a collarbone lob. Khloe Kardashian chopped her hair in early 2019 and then chose to take another few inches off. I'm addicted to my short hair,' she commented in her Instagram post. Model (and wife of Justin Bieber) Hailey Baldwin has alternated between slicked-back bobs and unfussy textured lobbs, and actress Rowan Blanchard traded in shoulder-length tresses for a feathery pixie cut. We've rounded up all the #shorthairdontcare inspo you need to consider for your next bold chop. From French bobs to blunt cuts to textured lobbs, here are the best short hairstyles for 2019 that everyone asks their stylists for. RELATED: 7 Hair Color Trends That's going to be great in 2019 Glamorous bobs courtesy of roaring '20s doesn't go out of style. Bring you in your long locks and split tips for a daring chop (a la Kim Kardashian and Kylie Jenner) like this elegant bob of @nicolasfloreshair. Bonus: This style can make even thin, fine hair appear super lush and thick. Blunt cuts (read: hair is cut the same length around), as this one of @jenniferpenny_hairstylist, has been spotted on celebrities from Selena Gomez to Lucy Hale. It helps to eliminate straggly strands and gives fine hair the illusion of volume and body thanks to the uniform blocky ends. Natural hair is always in style, and a shoulder-length trim is a great way to show off texture and kinky curls that look and feel super healthy. We love this fresh make of hair mastermind @davidlopezhair. RELATED: 7 Hair Color Trends All tried in 2018 Obsessed with chin length tresses, but don't want to flatiron hair regularly? This low-maintenance bedhead look @siobhankellyhair that's the answer you've been looking for. Just spritz hair with a little sea salt spray and scrunch. Love the shape of the bob, but not ready to let go of your length? Choose a playful textured, piecey lob, basically an adult bob, like this one by @beglamorouslybrenda. This happy medium still allows you to put your hair up in a pony for workouts! If you love to make a order an appointment with your stylist for this head-turning look of @aashhotelho ASAP. The dramatic angled lob style has been a favourite of Kim Kardashian, Margot Robbie and Katy Perry - and looks amazing to everyone. Going super short is no longer something to fear, thanks to hair-wisers who @jajaja.johnson. Pixie cut to try for 2019 is cropped on the sides and voluminous up the top, serving up Zoe Kravitz. Run your fingers with a slightly lightly texturing mousse through the top for a naturally tousled look. RELATED: The 12 best protein treatments for stronger, healthier hair Nothing says 't'es chic more than this trim of @jakesaltchik. Feel transported to the streets of Paris with a sophisticated French bob and elegant cropped bangs for a non-fuss look that will have you out the door in time every morning. An effortless collarbone crop of @dana_hairstylistnc is one of the hottest short haircut celebrities and influencers swapping their long manners for. Just take Karlie Kloss's lead and follow the suite. When you can't decide to go shorter or keep the length, you can have the cake and eat it too with these mismatched lengths at @peachiehair. Both Jenna Dewan and Vanessa Hudgen's rock stick-straight and wavy asymmetrical bobs and always look flawless. Curly bangs are so in and we love them on blogs @tierechristyan. While bangs tend to be a little more maintenance, they can really flatter your face shape, add dimension and soften a look. RELATED: The 9 Best Texturizing Sprays to Get Model-Off-Duty Wavy Hair This vintage cut courtesy of @lusso_hair_gives us 90s grunge meets Audrey Hepburn in Sabrina thanks to smooth layers, adorable ear plasty and flared ends. Count us obsessed. If you've been toying with the idea of hacking all your hair for a dreamy pixie but are terrified of being so short, an adult feminine pixie cut (think: Cara Delevingne) like this of @yokii.san might be in the cards for you. It still holds pixie shape, but the tresses are wispy, free, and stayed in. Brushing is hardly necessary. @alchemyorlando gives a fresh take on the lob with this shaggy chop along with side-swept bangs. Channel Emilia Clarke or Alexa Chung with textured layers to add lift and volume to your hair and side-sweeping bangs that soften the look. In addition, it takes less time to style short hair – something we long locked girls are completely envious of. There is also much more versatility and the ability to styling a short do than is given credit. We love an edgy card chop as much as the next girl, and have evidence to show that they can be dressed up, down, and everywhere in between. Check out our favorite short looks below! Imaxtree This runway looks so simple yet so elegant. Slick back your hair using Moroccan Oil Hydrating Styling Cream ($34), and pull it back into a tight, low ponytail at the neck. Let any face-framing fringe out for an unfinished look, or keep everything tight for a cleaner 'do. Imaxtree To get this look, share hair on the side, and then make simple, simple waves with Remington T-Studio Ceramic Pearl Professional Curling Wand ($30) by wrapping your hair around the dish. Slick back the unshakable side with styling cream, and pin any loose threads into place. Having long hair leaves many hairstyles at your disposal. Although your hair is technically up in a ponytail let's say, long hair has an effortless fall that happens to cascade down your neck, back or shoulders. As a hairstylist, long hair is my favorite to play with because the options feel really endless. Here are 50 covetable styles for long, cascading strands with tips to get you there every step of the way. 01 out of 50 While you have a little extra time on your hands, it may be worth trying a YouTube or Instagram video tutorial and learning a new braiding technique, like this waterfall braid. This pervasive duo is definitely a skill we want to acquire. Be gracious with yourself of course, and try to start with a single waterfall braid before you crush it and touch the other. 02 of 50 This hairstyle is a two for a deal here. What looks like a casual half-up top knot from the front is also part bubble ponytail! What a quick way to elevate such a simple style. 03 of 50 To get extra body and volume, rely on blow-drying dryer attachments to lend you a helping hand. Start by turning these ringlets upside down and using a diffuser to evenly distribute the air flow through the curls and help define the shape. Finish blow-drying with a wide toothcomb attachment to get extra lift off your scalp. When shaking the curls out, apply a little hairspray to keep its aired, volumised shape. 04 out of 50 With hair props so good, there's really no need to do much else with your hair. To try a similar appearance to these flowers, you can use floral floral or a needle and thread to attach heavier props to your threads. 05 out of 50 When it comes to having super long locks, you want to make sure your color is on point. With so much hair to work through, bugs can be left in there to hide under the surface, and when leaving with your hair curled, they can be harder to detect. Try to ask for a straight, even blowout, especially if you are more prone to correct it yourself at home. 06 out of 50 Tired of your hair splitting in the middle or always falling to one side? Try to use your hair back without parting for a change. Using a mixed brush (like a Mason Pearson) and your blowdryer with a nozzle attachment, start by directing your hair back and forth at the root to neutralize things. Then brush the hair back to the desired location and spritz with hairspray before letting the heat from the blower follow. Do this a couple of times and help your hair set with flat duck bill clip or no-crease clip. When you are done, attach a sock diffuser to the dryer and gently apply the cool setting to your threads. 07 of 50 To add a hippie look to your tresses, apply a generous spritz of hairspray over before creating four three-strand braids in your hair. Run over each braid with flat iron, gliding (not tapping) from roots to tips. Do this a couple of times before unraveling your braids. Use a wide toothcomb to break up the subtle turns and vent it out with your favorite dry texture spray. Throw up a peace sign, and you're groovy, baby. 08 out of 50 To get the most out of your curls or waves, make sure you have a haircut that gives good shape. Adding layers to hair types with a lot of natural movement allows your tresses to effortlessly fall into place. 09 out of 50 For beautiful, stylized twists, technique is really everything. For best results, make sure you use good voltage. You need a styling cream to help your twists hold and a fortress gel to apply on the ends to keep them together. Make sure you start with clean, detangled hair to help your twists last a good one to two weeks. 10 out of 50 There are some varieties of waves you can make with your flat iron. One of our favorites is the S wave. Just take a 1 part of the hair and gently push it up from below, so that it naturally pushes itself into a C shape. Press over that shape with the flat iron and continue to get down in your section, alternating the direction of the C shape to make your S. It sounds like a lot of letters to follow, but your hair will naturally create the shapes needed for this outcome. 11 out of 50 We love this modernization of a Japanese style bun, tall and structural in its form with deliberately long ends cascading down. Swapping chopsticks for an elegant, gold-haired needle and round barrette gives this style a modern edge, and we're totally on board for it. 12 out of 50 This woven fishtail requires some seriously long, cascading locks to get this level of detail. To begin high up on top of the occipital bone by bringing together both sides from a center parting and finishing classically with delicate, clean ribbon to tie things off. This braid requires some very fine sections to get such an intricate looking weave. 13 out of 50 Box braids are a classic go-to for long, cascading strands, natural or not. If your hair is not long enough, weaving in extensions is quite typical for this appearance. It's a very fun way to sport long hair for a couple of months. 14 out of 50 For a gelled look that is more natural and does not crunch up or leave leftovers around the hairline, turn to a soft mousse instead of a gel. Using the diffuser and some no-crease clips will help you guide your hair how you want it to sit at the roots. You can use a water-based pomade for detangling your edges or smoothing over your hairline if necessary. 15 out of 50 Protective accessories are going to help hairstyles last for several days at the end of preventing folds in hair. Some of my favourites are the gold claws and silk or satin scrunchies from My Kitsch. 16 out of 50 For soft curls like this, try using extra-large hot rollers and brush it out with Mason Pearson. Bumble's Dryspun thickening spray will help add more body to your style if necessary, and adding a ribbon or bow to the mix will give your style a very I stupid, feminine feel. 17 out of 50 An easy way to accessory long braids is this cross-the-way method with your banding of choice. This can be elastic, shoelaces, or any kind of colored thread. Just wrap the middle of the band around the top of your braid and cross them all the way down, tying the ends together. 18 out of 50 For a retro-inspired 60s look, a la Brigitte Bardot, use a teasing tail comb like this one from YS Park. Use the end of the comb to make a deep side part, then take thin sections on the crown and first spray the back of each section with hairspray before entering with your teasing comb. When you put all the sections down, brush gently over it to smooth it out with Mason Pearson. 19 out of 50 When it comes to choosing products for ultra-long waves, be on the lookout for ingredients like shea butter, coconut oil, or avocado oil to keep moisture a top priority for your hair. 20 out of 50 With threads for so long, your ponytails are bound to be nothing short of chic. Pulling the threads straight back from the eyeline will give a clean, tight look from the front as the ponytail cascades down the back. 21 out of 50 Take your bedhead waves from messy to glam'd up by throwing in a simple bejeweled hairpin or two. For a piecey look at the ends, rub a few pomade between your fingers and run them through the ends to get some separation. 22 out of 50 As if long, cascading braids are not attention-grabbing enough, wrapping some of them up in knots and letting others hang down has definitely caught our eye. 23 out of 50 Keeping your long, juicy curls defined is really just a matter of using the right size you choose a barrel too small, it will leave a very unnatural appearance, and if you go too wide, you will lack the severe volume your texture is able to give you. Using a serum or oil such as EVOLVh's Wonderbalm will also help provide a natural, easy separation. 24 out of 50 What's not to love with a classic cascading braid? A quick addition of this extra-large scrunchie around the base makes all the difference. 25 out of 50 You can use your favorite round brush to get a straight, full look from the blowout. When you get to the ends, give them a quick little twist for a fun, soft detail to your appearance. 26 out of 50 If you don't have wavy hair naturally, fake it until you do it by adding some Ouai Wave Spray ($26) to the threads and then scrunching up sections in your hand. Hit every handheld pile of blow-dryer. When your hair is completely dry, you can touch things up by going over some quirky waves or frizzier areas with curling irons, switching the direction of the barrel wrap halfway down the thread for the perfectly imperfect wild waves. 27 of 50 To get a full head of curls, wrap 1 part of the hair around a 1 curling iron. Make sure you pack each part in the same direction. When it's done, take a wet brush and rake through these curls, brushing out until what you get is a simple, coherent wave pattern with lots of lint and extra volume. 28 out of 50 Side-swept hair is an easy way to elevate your look for any occasion. If it's not your jam, check out our list of 20 Glamorous Side-Swept Looks for more inspo. 29 out of 50 These 3/4 waves have left us googly eyed. With extensions added for length, and a wet brush taken only through the ends of the hair, we are left with this wonderful Disco Glam fever. For more 70s hair inspo, click here for our nod to feathered hairstyles. 30 out of 50 Sometimes all it takes to get a retro-mod beauty-eating pairing of your cat eye with a thick headband. Could it be more low key than that? 31 out of 50 When a natural ginger or redhead has long, cascading hair, the little mermaid fangirl lives in me vicariously through her. 32 out of 50 Fun, funky updos like this require long threads to get full effect. Once you have secured the ponytail straight back from your ears, start twisting the ponytail, and then, just before it becomes too tight, lift the twist up to the bottom of the head and fasten with hairpins. Adding a bobby pin discreetly to the base will help provide extra ceilings to the threads before letting the ends hang out loosely. 33 out of 50 A triple or double barrel iron is an easy way to get a lot of beautiful movement into your hair with minimal effort. When you have extra-long threads, any tool that can help cut down on styling time is essential for your styling work. 34 out of 50 Get a huge bombshell barbie blowout requires starting from the beginning. Get your hands on a good volumizing shampoo and conditioner and follow up with a volumizing primer like this one Virtue labs. Applying the primer generously to the roots (wet or dry) and blow dry it in with your hands will have the hair reach for the sky in no time. 35 out of 50 Long hair is a prerequisite for some updo styles, like these double Dutch braided buns. Divide the hair down the middle to make two French braids. Then wrap the ends up in two bowls and fasten with hairpins. 36 out of 50 Long hair can provide a lot of natural volume when everything is gathered together tightly like this ballerina top knot. Turn your head upside down and spray your hairbrush with hairspray, and keep good tension when pulling your hair together to eliminate bumps. 37 out of 50 Super soft layers require super soft color. With an effortless color and cut combo that looks so natural, you can stretch salon visits to every six months at the minimum. 38 out of 50 Glitter always means a good time, am I right?! Either braided or straight down, use a colour brush or fine toothcomb to apply some gel around parting or style and dust glitter on while the product is wet, so it will stick. 39 out of 50 Who say face framing bites around the hairline must be short???? No one, that's who. We love watching Jessica Alba embrace these long cascading pieces around her face. Add a scarf wrap into the mix and a good view to channel the ultimate, laid-back holiday vibes. 40 out of 50 Long hairs do not always cascade down. Sometimes it runs out. No matter how it falls, we vote to just let everything hang out. 41 out of 50 The Queen of Bows, Nell Diamond, who also has the longest hair in the whole country, launched some of her own hair accessory - equipped with bows, of course - to accompany the nap dresses and silk pillowcases of her bedding brand, Hill House Home. 42 out of 50 A perfect imperfect attempt at random fishtail braids will have other swooning over the threads from all directions. 43 out of 50 When you have long, thick hair, it doesn't require a ton of effort in the hairstyling department for you to look completely put together. A simple classic like this half-up half-down style is sure to get plenty of admirers. 44 out of 50 Another fun way to spruce up a simple hairstyle on long strands is to add a different texture to your ends. Try pulling your hair up into a high ponytail and shrinking it to add some variety to your daily. 45 out of 50 Colored bobby pins are a playful touch to any hairstyle. Add two or three here and it can have a nice, subtle touch, or you can go all in and make a high statement piece like this color gradient of crossed bobby pins from roots to ducks. 46 out of 50 Sometimes the best accessory is right under the nose. We love this woven in wild grass on Olivia Wilde who was pulled from the stylists' own garden. 47 out of 50 If you want to get very experimental with your long strands, try to make a wet to dry look. Using a styling lotion or gel will help you shape and put your hair closest to your roots. 48 out of 50 Accessories are all hair length best friend. Jennifer Behr pins elevate a sheer, elegant ponytail to the next level. 49 out of 50 Giving yourself a deep side parting is a very fun way to enhance your look when you need a simple route to get yourself event ready. We've rounded up a few more of our favorite side-swept looks for you here. 50 out of 50 If you have long blond hair, try making a bold statement with a pop of pastel. Adding a temporary, playful color like pink or lavender will provide an instant, head-turning change to previously bleached hair. It will fade with each wash, so it is a short-lived relationship.
